Issues in Leadership

A monthly breakfast series for Chesterfield County Public School administrators

Focused on developing a dialogue of leadership between school administrators and scholars.

Please join us. The University of Richmond is pleased to announce Issues in Leadership, a monthly breakfast series developed by the Center for Leadership in Education for Chesterfield County public school administrators. The first in the series of seven breakfasts will be held on Tuesday, November 27, 2007, in the University of Richmond's Jepson Alumni Center, at 7:30 a.m. Dr. Patricia Wright, the Chief Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction for the Virginia Department of Education, will initiate the series.

Issues in Leadership is one component of Chesterfield County Public Schools' leadership and professional development programs for administrators and area-wide leaders. The breakfast series has been purposefully designed to be reflective and to engage participants in a discussion of the issues.

Center for Leadership in Education. A collaboration between the University of Richmond's Jepson School of Leadership Studies and the School of Continuing Studies, the Center for Leadership in Education infuses leadership studies across the K-12 curriculum.

The Center's mission is based on the principle that the study of leadership creates citizens prepared to exercise their responsibilities in a democratic society. Higher education has a duty to provide elementary and secondary education institutions with the capacity to sustain our democratic heritage.

The Center complements the purpose of the Jepson School, to educate people for and about leadership, and the mission of the School of Continuing Studies, to enrich lives and careers. Educating for leadership mandates development of critical and analytical skills. Educating about leadership requires a base of knowledge about the concepts required to be an active and engaged leader.

To register for a breakfast, please contact Harold Saunders at Harold_Saunders@ccpsnet.net or 743-3740.

All breakfasts are held in the Rosenbaum Room in the Jepson Alumni Center at the University of Richmond. Each event begins at 7:30 a.m. with a full buffet breakfast.

Presentation begins at 8 a.m. The program should conclude by 9:30 a.m.
